

5. Education and employment

4.1 Education

Education is recognised as a key determinant in human development through more opportunities and enhanced earnings. Unequal opportunities in access to education have long-term consequences that include intergenerational persistence of poverty. The level of education of the household head is a key determinant of future earnings, child health, and other social economic outcomes (Bourguignon et al. 2007, Kovacevic, 2010). Higher educational attainment across all segments of the population should enhance participation in the labour market, increase economic growth and ensure more equitable distribution of incomes in the long term.

Education policies that enhance access to disadvantaged areas can be used to change inequality patterns in the country. Lower transition to secondary education has implications for skill acquisition and opportunities for higher education associated with high income. Nationally, the proportion of the population with secondary school education and above is 22.8 percent while the majority (52.0 percent) have primary education. There is an existing pattern of inequality in education between rural and urban areas, and by gender of household head. This is partly attributable to migration dynamics showing a correlation between educational attainment and rural-urban migration. Despite high expansion in the education sector both in budgetary allocation and training personnel, 25 percent of the population have no education. The distribution of population with no education is higher in some counties and constituencies than others, as shown in consecutive tables in this report reflecting an differentials in access to education services.

Overall, 26.8 percent of the population in female headed households have no education compared with 23.5 percent in male headed households (see table 4.1). Individuals in female headed households in urban areas are 2.5 times more likely to have secondary education than those in rural areas. The size and proportion of the population with no education is higher in female headed households in both urban and rural areas. Conversely, the proportion of the population with secondary education and above is highest in male headed households in urban areas (40.4 percent).

There are spatial differentials in educational attainment. People with secondary education and above are concentrated in the Central and Western regions of the country (see figure 4.1). This differentiation in access can be attributed not only to a higher population density in these areas but also to a historical lack of investment in provision of infrastructure that ensures equitable access to education opportunities for all regions.

4.1.1 Secondary education

Attainment of secondary level education is highest in Nairobi County at 50.8 percent of the population followed by Kiambu (39.8 percent) and Mombasa (37.0 percent) counties (see table 4.2). Turkana (3.3 percent), Wajir (4.0 percent) and Mandera (4.7 percent) have the lowest level of secondary education countrywide. The median county in secondary education attainment is Bomet at 17.1 percent. Individuals in Nairobi County have 15.4 times more secondary education than those living in Turkana County and are 2.2 times more likely to have secondary education than an average Kenyan. On the other hand, those living in Turkana County are seven times less likely to have access to any secondary education than an average Kenyan.

Household headship by gender shows disparities in attainment of secondary education. The proportion of individuals with secondary education in male headed households is higher than that for female headed households across all counties. The highest attainment for male headed households is in Nairobi (53.4 percent), Kiambu (41.5 percent) and Mombasa (40.7 percent) Counties.

The worst performing counties for both male and female headed households are Turkana (4.2 percent for male headed and 2.4 percent for female headed households), Wajir (5.1 percent for male headed and 2.8 percent for female headed households) and Mandera (5.9 percent for male headed and 3.2 percent for female headed households). The variance between male and female headed households is highest in Mombasa County at 40.2 percent for male headed households and 32.8 percent for female headed households.

Inequalities are more pronounced at the constituency level in terms of secondary education attainment. The constituencies with the highest proportion of individuals with secondary education are Embakasi West (63.0 percent), Makadara (58.1 percent) and Langata (57.5 percent) (see Table 4.3). The constituency with the lowest proportion of individuals with secondary education is Loima in Turkana County at 0.8 percent, a whooping 79 times less than Embakasi West constituency.

The best performing counties for both male and female headed households are Embakasi West (65.6 percent for male headed and 60.8 percent for female headed households), Makadara (60.2 percent for male headed and 55.9 percent for female headed households) and Langata (58.8 percent for male headed and 56.1 percent for female headed households).

The lowest ranked constituencies in access to secondary education in MHH include Eldas (2.8 percent), Turkana North (2.1 percent), Balambala (1.8 percent), Tarbaj (1.5 percent) and Loima (1.1 percent). The lowest ranked constituencies for female headed households in access to secondary education are Lagdera (1.5 percent), Turkana North (0.7 percent), Balambala (0.8 percent), Turkana West (1.6 percent) and Loima (0.5 percent).

The probability of an individual to have secondary education in Loima Constituency (which is the lowest ranked constituency in access to secondary education for both male and female headed households) is at least 79 times less than that of an individual in Embakasi West (which is the highest ranked constituency in access to secondary education for both male and female headed households). If that individual comes from a female headed household in Loima constituency he or she is 120 times less likely to have secondary education compared with one in Embakasi West constituency or 28.5 times less likely to have secondary education than an average Kenyan. A male headed household in Loima has 2.2 times more secondary education than a female headed household in the same constituency.

4.1.2 Primary education

In 15 counties, the proportion of the population with primary education exceeds the national average of 52.0 percent. The counties with the highest proportion of the population with primary education are Migori (64.6 percent), Bomet (64.4 percent) and Siaya (63.8 percent). The counties with the lowest proportion of the population with primary education are Garissa (19.7 percent), Wajir (19.5 percent) and Turkana (14.5 percent) as indicated in table 4.4. County level proportions indicate that in the lowest ranked county, Turkana, an individual is four times less likely to have primary level education compared with Migori. The worst counties in access to primary education are Garissa (19.7 percent), Wajir (19.5 percent) and Turkana (14.5 percent).

The counties with the highest percentage of the population with primary education in FHH are Bomet (64.9 percent), Migori (64.8 percent) and Homa Bay (63.2 percent). Those with the highest in MHH are Siaya (63.8 percent), Meru (63.3 percent), and Kitui (63.3 percent) (see table 4.4). Garissa, Wajir, and Turkana Counties are ranked last for both male and female headed households.

Among constituencies, individuals in Uriri constituency, Migori County are eleven times more likely to have primary education than those in Loima constituency (6.2 percent), Turkana County. Baringo South constituency is the median county, with 58.2 percent of its population having primary education.

4.1.3 No education

Table 4.6 ranks counties with highest and lowest proportion of population with no education and by gender of household head. Turkana (82.1 percent), Wajir (76.4 percent), and Garissa (74.4 percent) are ranked as the counties with the highest proportion of the population with no education. The counties with the least proportion of individuals with no education are Nyeri (12.2 percent), Kiambu (12.0 percent) and Nairobi (11.1 percent). The median county is Elgeyo Marakwet at 20.2 percent. Turkana County (which has the highest proportion of the population with no education) is eight times more than the lowest ranked county, Nairobi. Turkana, Wajir, and Garissa Counties also have the highest proportion of the population with no education for both female and male headed households, with slightly higher rates in the female headed households than the male ones.

At constituency level, Loima has the highest proportion of individuals with no education at 93.0 percent compared with Makadara constituency with the least at 8.2 percent, implying that a person in Loima is 11 times more likely to have no education than one in Makadara. Other constituencies, namely Balambala (89.5 percent), Turkana West (89.2 percent), Turkana North (89.1 percent) and Tarbaj (85.5 percent) have the highest proportions of the population without education (see table 4.7) for both male and female households.

Constituency rankings indicate that Loima, Balambala, Turkana West, Turkana North and Tarbaj are the five constituencies with the highest proportion of their population with no education for both male and female households.

Ganze, Kaloleni and Kinango constituencies have acute differences between female and male headed households in the proportion of their population with no education. Overall, in all constituencies except Embakasi West, female headed households have a higher proportion of the population with no education (see annex Table 4.6).

Constituencies whose male headed households have the lowest proportion of their population with no education are Langata at 8.7 percent, Westlands at 8.3 percent and Makadara at 7.6 percent while Roysambu, Makadara and Embakasi West have the least at 9.4 percent, 8.6 percent and 8.3 percent respectively in female headed households.

4.2 Employment

The educational and skills base of a county is an important factor in matching job seekers and employment opportunities. Kenya, as is the case with many developing economies, is characterised by a labour market that includes household based enterprises, subsistence agriculture and a small wage sector. The country's labour force is estimated at 20,249,800 persons, with 7.7 percent of them having no work (see table 4.8). An estimated 23.7 percent of the population is engaged in wage employment (see figure 4.2). Those with secondary education and above in wage employment are 32.7 percent. The majority of the country's population is engaged in agriculture (32.0 percent) on family owned land.

Farm based agricultural economy is subject to intermittent external shocks such as crop failure due to unpredictability of weather conditions, high costs of inputs, inaccessible markets and competition from imports. Individuals in rural areas are largely engaged in farming on family owned land (43.5 percent) while in urban areas, individuals mainly engage in wage employment (38.1 percent). Individuals working in family owned businesses and fulltime students account for 13.1 percent and 12.8 percent respectively.

Educational attainment has implications for individuals' participation in the labour market. Employment for pay is higher for individuals with secondary education in both rural (21.3 percent) and urban (43.2 percent) areas.

The gender of the household head is an important factor in employment due to attitudes and cultural norms vis a vis participation in the labour market, with implications on poverty and inequality. Interestingly, in rural areas, a higher proportion of the population in female headed households are engaged in wage employment (31.5 percent) compared with male headed households (16.8 percent). Wage employment in rural areas consists mainly of casual labour in farms.

4.2.1 Population with no work

Overall, individuals living in urban areas who have no education are twice as likely to be without work as their rural counterparts. People with no education in Kenya are 1.7 times more likely to have no work than people with secondary education and above.

At county level, 21 counties report a higher proportion of individuals with no work than the national average of 7.7 percent. Wajir has the highest proportion of individuals with no work at 23.1 percent, which is 8.9 times the proportion in Nyamira (2.6 percent). The top eight counties have double digit proportions of those without work.

4.2.2 Employment on family landholdings

Employment on family farm holdings is at least 50 percent in six counties, with Nyamira (52.8 percent), Busia (51.9 percent) and Kisii (51.3 percent) leading. Higher educational attainment is associated with lower participation in family agricultural holdings (see table 4.11). Farm productivity is subject to sporadic weather patterns and price variability. Notably, in 22 counties, at least half of the population with no education are engaged in farming on family land compared with less than 50 percent for those with secondary education in all counties. Mombasa County has the lowest proportion of individuals working on family land at 3.1 percent.

At the constituency level, there are 62 constituencies out of 290 where at least 50 percent of the population work on family landholdings. Participation in agricultural activities decreases with increased educational attainment. Individuals with no education working on family landholdings is highest in Kuria East, at 83.2 percent, which is almost 28 times the level in Changamwe, which has the lowest share.

Diversification from farming activities in historically agricultural areas is attributed to less profitability and risks associated with population growth, crop and market failure. This is pushing farmers into off farm livelihoods or labour in alternative economic activites that are more viable given the changes in the structure of the economy.
